

RSS Feed 101

Are you interested in getting the latest news from Cornell delivered right to your e-mail client or browser? Then you should check out our RSS feed.

What is RSS?

RSS, which stands for Really Simple Syndication, is a way for sites to send their content to you, meaning you don't have to visit to stay up to date on the latest news.

Sounds great, how do I use RSS?

It's as easy as the name implies. If you're using Internet Explorer 7 or higher or Mozilla's Firefox, you can visit <http://news.cornellcollege.edu/rss> and click the link to subscribe. That's it! And you'll have access to all the latest news, photos and videos from Cornell. And if you subscribe using Internet Explorer, your feeds will be available in Outlook, as well.

VIDEO: "RSS in Plain English"

<http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=0klgLsSxGsU>

```
<iframe title="YouTube video player" width="480" height="390"
src="http://www.youtube.com/embed/0klgLsSxGsU" frameborder="0" allowfullscreen></iframe>
```