

Extraordinary Opportunities Parent Sessions

Saturday, November 5

9:45 a.m. – 10:30 a.m.

Description	Location
Introduction to Dimensions: The Center for the Science and Culture of Health Care Parents are invited to attend this reception to learn about Cornell’s interdisciplinary health science program, Dimensions: The Center for the Science and Culture of Healthcare. If your student is interested in medicine, dentistry, physical therapy, public health, pharmacy, or any other health science area, come hear about opportunities for internships, research experiences, off campus study, workshops, course offerings, and the professional school application process-	Paris, lower level of the Commons
Introduction to the Berry Center for Economics, Business and Public Policy What is the Berry Center? And, does it apply to my student? Come learn about the program designed to supplement what our economics, business, and public policy students learn in the classroom to prepare them for life beyond the Hilltop. The Berry Center exposes students to distinguished scholars, provides international academic programs, internships, off campus study, reading groups, graduate school and MBA program preparation, student-faculty research, career opportunities, and much more.	Stockholm, lower level of the Commons
Off Campus Study A study abroad experience can be life changing, educational, and beneficial as today's students begin their careers as global citizens. Attend this session to learn about Cornell courses that are offered off-campus, recommended programs outside of Cornell College and other ways that your student can incorporate an international experience into his or her college career. Tips for parents will include selecting a program and supporting your student during this exciting time.	Hedges, middle level of the Commons
Cornell Fellows and Internships Cornell offers a variety of resources to help students connect with hands-on experiential learning opportunities through fellowships and internships. This session will highlight how your student can take advantage of the various fellowship and internship programs around campus including Cornell Fellows, the college's premier internship program.	Shaw, middle level of the Commons
