
Transfer to Cornell College

An aerial photograph of the Cornell College campus. The image shows several large, multi-story red brick buildings with white window frames and shutters. A prominent tree with sparse green leaves is in the foreground on the left. A wide, light-colored paved path winds through the campus, with a few people walking on it. The surrounding area is lush with green grass and trees, some of which are beginning to show autumn colors. In the background, a rolling landscape with fields and distant hills is visible under a clear blue sky.

Junior transfer Mackenzie Crow '18 was happy that he selected housing on a floor with other transfer students his first year. He told his parents that listening to the stories of the nontraditional paths each transfer student had taken to Cornell—whether it was a year or two of soul searching, working, taking a gap year, or coming from another four-year school—made him feel part of a community right away. As he put it: “When you’re with transfer students, you’re with students who have bounced around life more.”

What's One Course At A Time?

One Course At A Time means you pick one course. Spend 18 days studying your subject. Get to know your classmates. Talk. Listen. Debate. Take 4 days off. Start over with a different course. No slow intros into subjects, and never experience deadlines of two exams and a paper all due on Friday. Instead you'll dive into subjects and become completely immersed for 18 days.

Picking the school to transfer to was very difficult and stressful because of the criteria I was looking for in a good school. I was hesitant at first about attending Cornell because it was far from home and had a radically different structure. However, I quickly found that One Course At a Time harmonized perfectly with my style of learning. The stress also melted away thanks to the fantastic staff that is always willing to help you through the process. I can honestly say that I owe my professors and the staff I got to know a lot for the success I have found in life.
