

2+2 Program | STUDIO ART

Studying studio art at Cornell means the opportunity to immerse yourself in your medium and have dedicated time to create as you focus One Course At A Time. Your hands-on study will culminate in a senior show where your art will be displayed in a gallery setting and shared with the college community. To prepare for that show, our studio art majors each have a studio of their own in McWethy hall to develop and prepare their work throughout their senior year.

Studying One Course At A Time

Our transfer students tell us that the micro-communities created in our classrooms make it easy to integrate into Cornell student life. Completing their AA gave them the strong foundation to take on the rigor of our One Course At A Time model and continue their focus to complete their bachelor's degree without missing a beat. Every 18 days you, your classmates, and your professor have just one subject to investigate, question, discuss, and explore how it applies to your future.
