

Due one week before the start of block the Independent Study will be credited

Independent Study Definition:

Students may do intensive work in a subject or area not normally included in the regular course offerings or else pursue in depth a topic encountered as part of previous studies. The arrangement is that of a tutorial, in which the student works independently under the supervision of a faculty tutor on a topic suggested by the student and approved by the tutor.

This would most likely include readings, papers, and literature reviews. Different from an Original Project, the goal of an Independent Study is not to create something new, but to learn about an existing topic by a student working on an individual basis with a professor.

- Prerequisites: 290 – a writing-designated course (W) and a minimum of seven credits (at least two of which are in the same department/interdisciplinary major as study); 390/490 – a writing- designated course (W) and a minimum of fourteen term (at least four of which are in the same department/interdisciplinary major as the study)
- Graduation Requirements: A maximum of four credits earned in Independent Credit Bearing Courses may be counted toward the 31 credits required to graduate. Note: Independent Study credit will not be approved retroactively.
